

Online Discussion Board

What is a new type of Awards Show that should be shown on prime-time TV?

10-16-2013, 03:06 PM

Melinda

How about an Awards Show for books? Some of the best movies (which have plenty of Awards Shows on their own) came from books – Harry Potter, Hunger Games, Twilight, Lord of the Rings. Plus, with so many books of different genres and topics, it could be an entertaining Awards Show!

10-16-2013, 03:20 PM

Eve

How about a "Good Samaritan" Awards Show? This would be on national TV to honor those who happened to make the right choices and take action when they saw someone in need.

10-16-2013, 04:31 PM

Joseph

Eve... I like your point, but I don't think the TV networks would be interested in showing a "Good Samaritan" Awards Show. People want to see movie stars, musicians, and pro athletes. I'm not saying that regular people aren't deserving of an award when they do great things... but nobody wants to watch them get it.

10-16-2013, 04:35 PM

DeeDee

How about an Awards Show dedicated to Technology & Gadgets. I bet people would want to see that to see what sorts of things shaped the world over the past year (and what types of gadgets they'll probably be spending their money to buy the next year).

10-16-2013, 04:39 PM

Bryan

Here's an idea... I think people should be allowed to vote on what Awards they want to give away, with no restrictions. At the end of the voting, there is a big primetime Awards Show to give out these awards. There might be a category for "Best Television Commercial" followed by "Best Fast Food Restaurant" followed by "Best Haircut on a Professional Athlete"... you get the idea.