

With Martin Luther King Day coming up soon, we thought it would be fun to take a look back at his elementary school days and review one of his Progress Reports (or at least what one of them probably looked like). Here goes:

Progress Report

Student: Martin Luther King, Jr. — 5th Grader

Subject: Language Arts
<input checked="" type="checkbox"/> Above Average <input type="checkbox"/> Average <input type="checkbox"/> Needs Improvement	Comments: Martin does well with reading and writing, but his speaking skills are just outstanding. I've never seen a student deliver such inspiring speeches in front of the class.

Subject: Math
<input type="checkbox"/> Above Average <input checked="" type="checkbox"/> Average <input type="checkbox"/> Needs Improvement	Comments: To be honest, Martin seems to have a problem with division. He loves to add and bring things together through multiplication, but he just doesn't like dividing things.

Subject: Social Studies
<input checked="" type="checkbox"/> Above Average <input type="checkbox"/> Average <input type="checkbox"/> Needs Improvement	Comments: Martin has a great sense of history, even though he's often disturbed when he hears about injustice. He's even made the bold claim that he's going to "change history."

Subject: Science

- Above Average
- Average
- Needs Improvement

Comments:

Martin really struggles with this subject. I've tried to explain to him that science is about things in the universe that can never be changed... and he just refuses to believe it!

Subject: Physical Education

- Above Average
- Average
- Needs Improvement

Comments:

Martin works hard and gets along with his teammates, but he doesn't like it that the class is divided into the "red" and "green" groups. "Can't we just be one?" he asks me.

Subject: Art

- Above Average
- Average
- Needs Improvement

Comments:

Wow! Martin really excels in this area. He did a painting in class called, "The World the Way It Should Be"... and it was beautiful!