

A group of teachers get together to watch the Super Bowl. Here is what each one is thinking as the game is played.

The MATH teacher is thinking...

“If the Seahawks go for a 2-point conversion, and then the Patriots get a 3-point field goal, and then if they recover an onside kick and run the ball 4 yards per down six times in a row... it’s almost too easy!”

The LANGUAGE ARTS teacher is thinking...

*“This football game is like a metaphor for life, as one team tries to gain ground and the other creates obstacles for the protagonists to overcome—
Oh come on, ref... How did you miss that holding penalty?!”*

The SCIENCE teacher is thinking...

“What a great mascot the Seahawks have... a majestic creature that soars above the earth and spots potential prey with its keen eyesight. Too bad I want the Patriots to win this game.”

The SOCIAL STUDIES teacher is thinking...

“The great Patriot, to whom we owe our freedom and our system of American Democracy. To that Patriot, I say ‘thank you’... but I want the Seahawks to win this game.”

The DRAMA teacher is thinking...

“I’m only watching the game for the commercials.”

The Music teacher is thinking...

“I’m only watching the game for the halftime show.”
